"Liberal in lithings else, yet nature here With stern seventive dealsout the year.

Wither invades the Spring and often pours A chilling floud on summer's drooping flowers."

I and Cowper been inclined to poetise our season's he could not have hit upon of vegitation—than the above quotation conveys. The brief it contains the very would our present season.

June may be yet the merriest of months but the noise of idle pleasure seekers, must be drowned by the sharp clutter of many hoes as they do their share in the preparation of food for the sustinence of thousands.

The lively dinner horn is always a joyful sound on the farm, and yet if not preceded by the plowmans in bor and the sound of the cradle. The mariner of the horn would soon be deafened : not only over the quiet hills and meadows of the peaceful farm, but the bustle of the busy city would soon grow still. Did these thoughts although natural over occur to the farmers of this state, and if so with how much pleasure must the faithful tiller of the soil resume his sometimes ardans task.

And the sluggard does, he ever think that he is not only helping on his own ruin, but that of others, who have been placed as it were in his care, by the orders of an ever wise Providence.

The season has been so late that we have not all finished planting.

Thus, a Rhode Island farmer wants seed to plant the 2d, week in June, let him procure it from Canada and he will run no risk of its not ripening, but should his seed come from a more southern latatude failure is certain, and although this matter appears plain we know of two gentlemen who have been led into this error, and had a sad lesson of experience taught them, by

If it is desired to acclimatize a superior kind of seed from the south, a small plot should be planted early as the frost will admit on good land well manared, and every means taken by constantly stiring the soil to secure its early maturity. —In the course of a few year's it will become as hardy as any of a

To raise line corn, a good sward or, clover ley should be manured broadcast with from 35 to 40 horse loads of stable or yard manure to the acre, plow deen, which will be necessary to cover the manure, then level the furrows with a good roller, and follow immediately lengthwise of the furrows with a heavy from tooth harrow, mark the lot out with lines four feet apart both ways, and it is ready to plant, which should be done at the intersection of the rows. > By the latter method about 8 twohorse loads of manure are necessary for one acre.

As soon as the shoots attain from 3 to 4 inches in height the first cultivation should be commenced, by running the Cultivator or horse hoe through both ways, then with the hoe and hind disengage any of the leaves which may have been covered by the operation of the Cultivator, and draw the cart's slightly towards the plant, but do not be led into the orror of hilling, which is as injurious as it is common, except on very wet lands. The after cultivation consists of running the culticator through as often as once a week as they're going to. Are they? Yes-

HARRY COVERDALE'S COURTSHIP,

AND WHAT CAME OF IT.

'Yes; and then you and Lancelot went flying over it as ligh ly as if he'd had wings, like that fabuous humbig Pegasus, that old Buzwig is always bothering us about. The copy-book says, Practice before precept, and so say I. Why, did you not expect I was going to be such a muff as to stry behind, did y a ?'

'I was a fool if I did, at all events,' muttered Harry, Sotto voce; then turning good-naturedly to the boy, he continued. 'The copy-book also says, What can't be cared must be cadured, does it not, Tom? so we muse get our of the scrape as best we can. We ll leave the poly at the nearest farm-house, and I'll send my groom to doc-ter him—so lead him by the rein and come along.'

Of course, when they joined the rest of the party and told their m sdeeds. Alice lam nted over the pony's troubles after the fashion of to derhearted young ladies; of course Ifazlehurst senior, discerning a long farrier's bill in prospective, with the possibility of being coaxed out of a new pony as a not unlikely contingent result, was grumpy, as governors usually are, when they forsee a strain upon their purse-strings; and of course, although these lamontations and threatenings were launched at the curly head of mas er Tom, they yet glanced off that unimpressible substance, only to full upon and overwholm with shame and confusion Harry Coverdale, who begah men ally to carse the day when. false to his own presentiments, he had yielded to his friend's importanities, and antiered himself to become and in the or Hazlehurst Grango. Bent on avoiding young ladies, and having no taste for the society of old o cs. Harry wandered about disconsolately, until, at racted by a dark archway and until he raced by a care arrowny and a worm-caten winding staircase, which, as master Tom expressed it, looked "jolly queer and ghostified," he made his way up the mouldering steps un il he found himsel at the top of a hattlemented lower, where he was repaid for the trouble of the uscent, by a beautiful and widely-extending view. Having contrived to get rid of the voluble and restless Etonian, C verdale seated himself on a projecting fragment of masonry, and gl neing found to see that he was not observed or observable, lit a eigar and, his ruffled feelings being soothed by its mollifying influence, remained lazily watching the movements of the pleasure-seekers—his reflections running somewhat after the following fa-h-

There's old Cranemaudering about

after Alice as usual—don't think he g ts on with her though, rather tother way I should say. She looked awfully bored and rather frightened too, up in that placeton with him; and no wonder either, for the old boy is nothing of a whip-I should be sorry to trust a cat of mine to his driving. Ah! sac's given him the slip, and that has taken him in tow I can't make that woman out-she is so civil to him; perhaps she thinks the affair with A ice may miss fire, and she is looking out for the revers on of the cotton-spinner herself. Archur says she's very poor, and that there are a large family of them; if so, its not a bad dodg , and supposing she plays her cards well, one by no means unlikely to succeed. There's that confounded puppy D'Almayne gone swaggering up to Alice, stroking his stupid moustachies—yes, and she smiles and takes his arm, and of course, believes all his lies, and thinks him a hero, I dare say. Oh! the poor silly fools of woman that can't listinguish a man from a Jackauapes: should have fancied Alice had more sense; but they're all alike. Look at idiot simpering, that't only to show his white teeth now : the brute has no idea of a real joke-hasa't got it in him—well, thank goodness it's no coneern of mine; but if I were Crane I d interfere with his flirtly grather. The fellow talks as if he was a dreadful fire-cater-I should like to try what he's made of; but I expect it's all talk and nothing else-I wish I could coux . him late putting on the gloves with me some day-I'd astonish his moustachios for him. I wonder where no-yes, b. Jove'it he isn't going to bered 60,000 men; but abstained from all take her acr as that field which Tom pursuit. and I rode through, where the bull was grazing the brute is dangerous, or I am much mistak n found the fool, he'll go and frighten the poor girl out of ser senses, and perhaps, get her hu t into the bargian; for. I the bull really is vicious, ten to one Moustacki s loses his presence of mind, and does something ridiculous. I've a great mind to follow them, it can do no haim, and may do some good-gad I will too. Alice is far too pretty to be gored by a bul; be-sides, for Arthur's sa e, one ought to take care of her-luckily, I've ju t finished the cigar, so off we go,"

Having arrived at this point in his meditation , Harry rose from his seat, ran lightly down the stairs til he reached a ruined window about six feet from the ground, thro gh which he leaped, then settling into a long swingi g tr t, he ran, at a pace with which few could have kept up, in the direction taken b. REPUBLICAN NOMINATION. FOR REPRESENTATIVE TO CONGRESS, EASTERN DISTRICT, THOMAS DAVIS, OF NORTH PROVIDENCE

The Progress of the War.

By two additional steamers from Europe (the Africa et New York and the Argo at St. John's,) we have news from England to the 30th, ult.; and from the seat of war to the day preceding. Both armies were marching and counter-marching; apparently less anxious to display their valor in the field than that "better part" of the virtue known as discretion. Still the newspaper writers and other leading at horities on militar, affairs see in it all profound strategeric preparations for a grand battle, the , rec se site of which some ore hold enough to point out as at Mortara, a small town some miles within the Sardinian frontier. We doubt whether the Austrian army will ever have a chance to reach that if they should wain.

Meanwhile Garibaldi, the Italian general, who with his life u.ar troops was barely tolerated as an ally by the French and Sardinian monarch has achieved the first brilliant action of the war.

By the previous intelligence we learned that he had crossed the frontier of Lumthat he had crossed the nomier of Loun-bardy with the notation of resultationizing the people, this 6,000 volunteers forming a nucleus around which the insurge is neight rally. In this it a, pears he has been comrally. In this it a, pears he has been com-pletely successful. Already had an insur-rection taken place in the Vaitelline, a pletely successful, rection taken place in the valtetine, a mountainous region of Lombardy, at the foot of the A'ps and north of the Luke of Gomo. The insurgerts had joired his standard in such numbers that 800 of them were in possession of an Austrian steamer were in possession of an Austrian steamer on the lake. All the Austrian steamers on on the lake had talten into Garib idishands, and ofter a battle of five hours duration, he ad made a thriumphal entry into the town of Como, amidst the ringing of bells and intuminations, evidently showing that the heavie of the manie of wang that the hearts of the people of Lombady were with Sardinn in the struggle, and that they only wanted the opportunity to throws off the yoke. the

Nor is this all; the Austriana were pursned and defeated again, and were m treat belone the victorious troops of the hero of Rome. Their line of flight was toward Arian, which shows that this tion of Gambanni is more important than at first sight it would seem to the superficul observer. The object of the movement was evidently two-ord-mot only to incite insurrection in the north of Lombady and dr to the Aus rious down southward to the drye the ous rions don't sould the pusses plants, but to take possession of the pusses of the Balosen and the Stevio, which of the Spheren and the Origin, would decomptish the double onje tol preventing a retreat of the Austrian's by hose routes until they were descared in a pitched hattie, and also of preventing their pushing troops down to use passes o assail the alie in the flank or rear after they had auto the Book or rear once, they had ad-vanced into Lombold.

The summer of the Splugen is only twenty-three innes from Come. The direct road across the Sprugen leads to the Gri-Bous in Switzer and jour the Australias have constructed a road which comminguistics road which tempumenter with it from the 13rd, t. eir own terrnory. It is carried imough three potentil galieries which are the longest in the A ps. It passes through the Varietine of the Lake of Como, and thence to Milan. Unt off from this found, the Austrians would be limited for recreat to the Brenner Pass, or for offensive Atpine operations to that route which connects the Tylol by railroad with Veiona, and Sives the latter its great mintary strength. The castward line, by the way or Ventee and Trieste, Lay bach and the being ening Aip, stands a fair chance of being cut on by the operations of the French troops to the right.

The more particulars we gain of the battle of Montebello, the more difficult it is to judge of the real importance of that action as a test of the fighting qualities of the combatants.

The official Wiener Zeitung publishes Gen. Guyubal's report to the Emperor of the details of the affair. Wounded, 718; killed, 290; missing, 283. The enemy num-

The Emperor had addressed to Gen Gyulai an autograph letter; expressing to him and the troops in general his Majesty's letter also directs a list to be drawn up, in order that their names may be niade known in their respective homes.

The Vienna correspondent of The London Times furnishes a version of the battle to the effect that Count Stadlon passed the Po on the 20th by the strongly fortified bridge at Vacarizza with 25,000 men, to ascertain the position of the French. He found them in Castezzio, which he stormed. He then came upon Baraquay D'Hilliers army, near Montebello. He attacked so as to make the enemy display his strength-In the fight Sta ion was wounded. The French brought up fresh troops, by rail, during the battle. . At night Stadion re tired, having effected his purpose.

Never did the gold and silver shield display more unlike sides than this battle as seen from French or Austrian stand points But there is something naif in a general's attacking "so as to make the enemy display his strength" and retiring "having effected his purpose."

Private accounts say the real loss of the French was 1,000 to 1,100 men.

The Times' Pavia correspondent says the Austrians admit that the French fought splendidly. From the hights the Austrians beheld t'e novelty of train after train of French troops arriving by railway from of value. It is not probable that the letters Voghora, digorging them and immediately hastening back, for more,

We can assure our contemporary that worse men than George T. Downing have often been supported for high office in its columns. We cannot say that we are fully prepared to support him for President: but he certainly would be less disgrace to the country as Minister to France than ! some white folks whose appointment to that post is supposed to be very dear to the Heralds beart.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

COURT OF JUSTICES. FRIDAY, June 10. The long delayed case of State vs. Margaret

Sullivan, for assault and battery on Catherine thanks for their remarkable valor. The Corkery, was before the Court t. is morning. Catherine was the principal witness for the prosecution; but when she came to be sworn, t turned out that not a word of the English lauguage could she understand, being intense ly Irlah. An interpreter, however, was found la a countrywoman of hers, and the case pro-ceeded, the defendant having plead " not guilty." Sylvester R. Hazard, Esq., for prosecution-W. P. Sheffield for defence.

The testimony of this witness was quite lengthy, a portion of which we give below, mithe interpretation, appealing to every trishman in town for its correctness:

"I zog hat mur mallymee, ker-r-r- slap orlyfumach dill, rointy soforkan murch dill; murzy donty sullup waddan wiperdash mulkey woc. I vuantell gip sloddish, foruenst dirgo sunchy wilken medion sligget..."

Here our pencil broke short off and we were compelled to stop. Margaret was sentenced to 30 days in the State's juil, which considering that she ture the scalp half off Catherine's head and afterwards tumbled her down stairs, was getting off pretty easily.

BURGLARY-THE POST OFFICE BROKEN OPEN AND ROBBED.—The Post Office in this city was broken open Thursday night, the entrance being effected through a back window. The Postmuster was surprised the next morning, to find that boxes and letter-rack had been almost entirely cleaned out. On further examination he discovered a back window open, and that about fifty dollars, in stamps and change, had been abstracted from the drawer. This was about the extent of their depredations. A pile of letters made up for the morning mails, were overlooked, as were also several other article: abstracted contained much money. No trace of the robbers has been discovered.
